SIDEKICK LOGISTICS

For hair salons, barbershops, nail and lash studios, spas and med-spas

Donna answers the phone, books the chair, and texts the client. While you're mid-blowout.

An AI receptionist who knows your services, your prices and each stylist's hours, books around the clock, confirms by text, fills cancellations from your waitlist and brings regulars back on their own rhythm. In your salon's name and voice. Nothing for your clients to download.

Hear her yourself. Call our demo salon and ask Donna about services, prices, or to book a haircut.

(817) 506-4765

accounts@sidekicklogistics.com

THE PROBLEM

Every call you miss is a booking that walks to the salon down the street.

Clients call nights, weekends and in the middle of your busiest hour, which is exactly when nobody is at the desk. Most will not leave a voicemail. They just book somewhere else.

Saturday 9 PM

is when people finally sit down to book. The desk closed at 6.

No-shows

happen when nobody confirmed, nobody reminded, and nobody filled the hole.

Hands busy

Your stylists are with clients. The phone, the texts and the DMs pile up anyway.

WHAT SALON OWNERS TOLD US THEY NEED

- Someone who knows that highlights take three hours and a haircut forty-five minutes, and books the right stylist in the right gap.
- Confirmations and reminders by text, because nobody reads email, and a way for clients to say "C" and be done.
- Combos booked back to back ("cut and color with Mai") without a phone tag.
- Regulars recognized: "your usual with An?"
- Cancellations filled from a waitlist before the hole shows up in the day.
- Allergies and color formulas where the stylist sees them, not in a text thread.

> CLIENT "Hi, I'd like to book a haircut and color with Mai next Thursday afternoon."
>
> DONNA "Hi Priya, welcome back. Since you have a sensitive scalp I'll note that for Mai. For a haircut and color together Mai has one, one thirty, two, two thirty or three. Which works?"
>
> CLIENT "Three, please."
>
> DONNA "You're all set with Mai for a haircut and color, back to back, Thursday November twelfth at three. I've texted you a confirmation."

That is a real test call. Donna recognized the returning client, read her allergy note, checked the full two-hour-forty-five-minute block, booked both services and sent one text.

WHAT DONNA DOES

One front desk. The whole job.

Answers the phone, 24/7

- Picks up in under two rings, in 25 languages, in your salon's name and the voice you pick.
- Knows every service, how long it takes and what it costs; answers "how much is a balayage?" in one sentence.
- Says your stylists' names right (you tell her how they sound).
- Recognizes regulars by number: their usual service, their usual stylist, their next appointment.

Books the right chair

- Each stylist's own hours and book. Solo? Your hours are the hours. Team? Donna offers the stylist they asked for, or whoever is open first.
- Offers times in the window the client asked for: "after 2", "Saturday morning".
- Combos booked back to back as one visit, one confirmation.
- Reschedules and cancels existing bookings, found by the caller's number. Two on the same day? She asks which.
- Syncs to Google or Microsoft calendar.

Text-first, like clients expect

- Confirmation by text from your own number: "You're booked for Haircut with An on Thursday at 4. Reply C to confirm, R to reschedule, or CANCEL."
- Reminder the day before at 6. Replies handled on the spot: R offers open times and moves it; CANCEL frees the chair and the waitlist fills it.
- "Running 10 late" texts the stylist. "When's my appointment?" gets an answer. Anything else lands in your Inbox to text back.
- Donna can text the booking link, your address or hours during a call.

Keeps the book full

- Waitlist that books the next person who fits the opening and wanted that time of day, then texts them.
- "Time for your next color": a nudge at each service's cadence with a one-tap link to the same stylist.
- Win-back for clients you haven't seen; thank-you and review ask after the visit.
- Promotions to your whole list by text or email, when you choose.

Client card and intake

- Allergies and sensitivities in red, color formulas, preferences and stylist notes on every client.
- Donna reads the flags before booking a chemical service and asks new clients about sensitivities.
- Consultation and consent forms sent by text before color or lash work; "Form completed" shows on the appointment.

Your own booking page and your team

- A branded page with your logo, colors and photo, verified by a one-time code. Clients pick service, stylist and time.
- Put the Book button on Google, Instagram, Facebook and your website in a few taps; print the QR for the mirror.
- Every stylist gets a login, a Today view with their clients and flags, a Running-late button, and their own booking link for their bio.

A THURSDAY WITH DONNA

What the day looks like with the desk handled.

TIME	WHAT HAPPENED	WHAT YOU DID
7:40 AM	Client texts "running 10 late" to her 8:00 reminder. Donna texts An and emails you.	An saw it on her phone. Started with a blowout instead.
9:15 AM	New client calls: highlights Saturday morning, "whoever's open", asks about a deposit, mentions a sensitive scalp, gives her email. Donna checks the three-hour block for both stylists, answers from your policy, notes the allergy, books Mai at 9, texts and emails.	Nothing. The allergy is on the client card.
11:30 AM	Regular calls to "book my usual". Donna: "Your usual is a haircut and color with Mai." Earliest openings Tuesday to Friday read back, booked Tuesday at 9.	Nothing.
1:05 PM	A 2:00 client cancels by text. Donna frees the chair; the first waitlisted client who wanted an afternoon and fits the slot is booked and texted.	Watched the hole close on the Today view.
2:20 PM	Client wants to move Thursday's cut to Friday at 10 with An. An is booked at 10; Donna offers 9, 11 and 11:30, moves it to 11, texts the new time.	Nothing.
4:45 PM	Spanish-speaking client cancels Saturday. Donna handles it in Spanish and offers to rebook.	Nothing.
6:00 PM	Reminders go out for tomorrow. Three clients reply C within the hour.	Nothing.
8:30 PM	Someone taps your Instagram link, books a blowout for Saturday, and gets her code and confirmation by text.	Saw it on your calendar in the morning.

EVERY ONE OF THESE IS A REAL TEST DONNA HANDLED WHILE WE BUILT HER.

The transcripts and texts live in your dashboard next to the appointments they created. Nothing in this brochure is a mock-up.

WHY DONNA

Compare her to a booking app, a front-desk hire, or voicemail.

	BOOKING APP ONLY	FRONT-DESK HIRE	DONNA
Answers the phone at 9 PM Saturday	No	No	Yes
Books by phone, text and online	Online only	Phone, during hours	All three, 24/7
Knows services, durations, prices, stylists	You configure it	Eventually	Yes, from day one
Confirms and reminds by text, handles the replies	Sends, doesn't handle	Manually	Automatically
Fills cancellations from a waitlist	Sometimes	If they have time	Automatically
Rebook nudges, win-backs, review asks	Add-on	Rarely	Included
Spanish, Vietnamese, Mandarin, 22 more	No	Depends	25 languages
Monthly cost	Per seat	A salary	Flat, less than one empty chair a week

BUILT FOR TRUST

- Donna never quotes a price or policy that is not on your service list or in what you approved. When unsure, she takes a message.
- She reads back emails, names and numbers so they are right the first time, and never says a confirmation went out unless it did.
- Every call is transcribed and summarized; every text she sends is in your Inbox.
- Clients can opt out of texts with one word, and she respects it.
- Your clients and your knowledge stay in your account. Nothing is shared between salons.

GETTING STARTED

Set up in an afternoon. Your clients never learn a new app.

1. Tell Donna about the salon.
   Name, hours, what you call your people (stylist, barber, technician), who to transfer to.

2. Your services.
   Donna starts you with the usual menu for your kind of shop. Fix the names, lengths and prices. Add processing time for color so the chair isn't blocked while it develops.

3. Your team.
   Add each stylist with their hours. They get a login and their own booking link. Solo? Skip this.

4. Go live.
   You get a local number and your own Donna email. Forward your line or publish the number. Put the Book button on Google and Instagram from the dashboard.

Included

- Local phone number with texting
- Donna's own email address for your salon
- Branded booking page, QR code, per-stylist links
- Confirmations, reminders, waitlist, rebook nudges, win-backs, review asks
- Client cards, intake forms, call transcripts, Inbox
- Stylist logins with a Today view
- A real person at Sidekick Logistics to help you set up

Works with what you have

Google or Microsoft calendar. Your current email inbox. Your existing number can forward to Donna, so your signs and cards stay the same. Bring your client list from your phone or a spreadsheet.

TRY HER BEFORE YOU DECIDE

Call our demo salon line right now. Ask Donna what a color costs, book a haircut for Saturday, then move it. That is the same Donna your clients will reach, with your name, your services and your stylists.

(817) 506-4765

accounts@sidekicklogistics.com · sidekicklogistics.com