SIDEKICK LOGISTICS

For the trades: HVAC, plumbing, electrical, landscaping, mowing, pool service, handyman, roofing, painting, remodeling and thirty more

Donna answers the phone, books the job, and gets you paid. You just do the work.

Donna is an AI receptionist for one-truck and small-crew shops. She picks up every call, quotes your trip fee from your settings, books the visit with the address, texts the customer, pages the on-call tech after hours, and when you text her DONE she bills the job. No app to learn. No office person to hire. Your money goes straight to your own bank.

Hear her yourself. Call Donna at Sidekick Logistics and ask what we do, what it costs, or to book a time.

THE PROBLEM

You can't answer the phone with your hands in a panel. The job goes to whoever did.

Most people who get your voicemail call the next name on the list. The ones who do leave a message want a callback you don't have time for, and then they need an invoice you'll write at 10 PM.

Missed calls are missed jobs. Nobody waits for a callback when the AC is out.

Paperwork at night

invoices, estimates, confirmations, reminders, "what's your address again".

Software you won't use the apps built for this have forty features and a monthly bill per user.

WHAT CONTRACTORS TOLD US

- "I don't want an app. I want to text somebody 'done' and have the bill go out."
- "Half my customers speak Spanish. So does half my crew."
- "Don't touch my money. I want it in my account, not sitting somewhere."
- "Don't let a computer quote my jobs. I set the price."
- "If it's an emergency at 2 AM, somebody better get paged. And if he doesn't answer, page the next guy."

> CALLER "Hi, my AC's running but it's not cooling. Can somebody come out Thursday morning?"
> DONNA "Let's get you on the schedule. What's the address where you need us? ... One eighteen Sunset Ridge, Arlington, seven six zero one zero. Is there a gate code or a dog the tech should know about? ... Thursday morning I have eight, nine, ten, ten thirty or eleven thirty. ... Eight it is. There's a forty-nine dollar service call, and that comes off the repair if you go ahead. You're all set for Thursday at eight; I've texted you a confirmation."

That is a transcript from a test call. Donna got the address first, offered only openings a tech could actually reach, quoted the trip fee from the shop's settings, booked a real slot and sent the text.

WHAT DONNA DOES

She's the office. You're the truck.

Answers every call

- Picks up 24/7, in 25 languages. Switches when the caller does.
- Knows your services, trip fee, hours, after-hours policy and service area. Only says what you set in your dashboard.
- Asks the two or three questions your trade needs so the tech arrives ready: heat or cool, breaker tripping, is the water off, gate code, dog in the yard.
- Recognizes repeat customers and their address.

Books the visit

- Gets the address before offering times. Only offers openings for a tech who does that trade, covers that zip, and has drive time to get there.
- Confirmation and day-before reminder by text, from your number.
- Recurring routes for mowing, pool, filters and pest: set it once (weekly, every other week, monthly, quarterly, in season) and the visits land on the tech's day with the price attached.
- Optional card on file at booking for the services you choose. Nothing is charged until the work is done.

Runs your day by text

- OMW 20: the customer gets "Joe is on the way, about 20 minutes."
- LATE 15, HERE, NEXT for the next stop with a map link, MOVE, CANCEL JOB, or send a photo to pin it to the job.
- DONE: Donna lists the work, asks about add-ons, totals it, and asks: send the invoice, charge the card on file, hold it, or mark it paid?
- Or just talk to her: "tell Maria I'm ten out", "what's next", "Dan paid cash". She asks when she needs more.
- Or use the phone app: big buttons, Face ID, English or Spanish.

Gets you paid

- The customer gets a text with the total and a Pay button, pays from their phone, and gets a receipt. You get a text when it lands.
- Cash or check? Tap "They paid me." Receipt goes out, invoice closed.
- Estimates: your tech writes every number; Donna texts the quote, nudges after three days, and books the job the moment the customer taps Approve.
- Optional card processing fee (you pick the percent) only when they pay by card. Every invoice and payment exports to a spreadsheet.

AFTER HOURS

2 AM, the pipe burst. Here's what happens.

You decide the policy once: take after-hours calls or don't, charge a flat fee or a multiplier, and whether the fee is paid before anyone rolls. Donna follows it on every call.

If you take after-hours calls

- Donna gives the safety step first: gas smell means leave the building and call 911; water means shut the main.
- She quotes your after-hours charge once, plainly, and asks if they want to go ahead.
- She gets the full address and the problem, then pages the first tech on your on-call list by text.
- No reply in 15 minutes (you set the number)? She pages the next tech, then you. Whoever texts ACK gets the job; the others are told it's covered.
- Prepay option: the caller is texted a secure link to pay the after-hours fee first, and the tech is paged the moment it's paid. The fee is applied to the visit.

If you don't

- Donna books the next regular opening and tells the caller when to expect you.
- True emergencies still get the safety advice and an urgent message you see first thing.
- Switch the policy any time from your phone. No code, no call to support.

THE ON-CALL TECH'S PHONE

DONNA → JOE "Joe's HVAC AFTER-HOURS: Dan Reyes +1 (240) 617-4712 at 2210 Pecan Drive, Arlington 76010. Central AC not running at all, 95 degrees in the house with a baby. (After-hours fee $75 goes on the invoice.) Reply ACK to take it; otherwise Mike is paged in 15 min."

JOE → DONNA "ack"

DONNA "It's yours. Text OMW when you head out; the customer gets the heads-up."

YOUR MONEY

Your Stripe. Your bank. We never touch a dollar.

Most software in this market holds your payments, charges you to get them faster, and leaves you alone when a customer disputes a charge. Donna doesn't take payments at all. Your customers pay you.

How it works

- Tap Connect Stripe in Donna once. Have a Stripe account? Sign in. Don't? The same button creates one in about five minutes.
- Every Pay button, every card on file, every charge runs through your Stripe account. The money goes to your bank on Stripe's normal schedule.
- Stripe's standard card fee applies (2.9% + 30¢). Donna adds nothing. Want the customer to cover it? Turn on the card processing fee and pick the percent; cash and check never pay it.
- Refunds, disputes and payouts: your Stripe dashboard, same as a card reader.

Don't want card payments?

- Skip the Stripe step. Donna still sends the invoice by text and you tap "paid" when they hand you the check. The customer still gets a receipt.
- Turn it on later with one tap. Nothing else changes.
- Your customer list, your jobs, your estimates and your invoices are yours. Export any time.

BUILT FOR TRUST

- Donna never prices a job. She quotes the trip fee and after-hours charge you set, and nothing else. Estimates are written line by line by your tech; over a limit you choose, you approve them before the customer sees them.
- Nothing goes to the customer until you say so. You see the lines and the total before you tap Send or Charge.
- Every call is transcribed and summarized; every text she sends is in your Inbox. Photos your techs text in are on the job.
- Your customers and your settings stay in your account. Nothing is shared between businesses.

SET UP

Twenty minutes, from your phone.

Pick your trade, list your services, set your trip fee, hours and after-hours policy, add your crew with the zips they cover. Donna is answering by the end of it. The phone app installs from a QR code; no app store.

Starter

One-person shop. You're the only one on the schedule.

- Phone answering, booking, texting, reminders
- Text commands and the phone app
- Estimates, invoices, Pay button, card on file, receipts, exports
- After-hours policy with paging and optional prepay
- Recurring routes

Pro

Owner plus techs. Each tech gets their own jobs, texts and app login. You're bookable only if you want to be.

- Everything in Starter, for the whole crew, no per-user fee
- Dispatch by trade and zip code
- On-call ladder: page the first tech, then the next, then you
- Estimate approval limit: big quotes wait for your OK
- Owner sees every job, estimate, invoice and text

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

- Your services, how long each takes, and your trip or service-call fee (and whether it comes off the work).
- Your hours, your after-hours policy, and the mobile numbers for whoever's on call.
- The zip codes each tech covers and the trades they handle (or leave blank for anywhere, anything).
- Optional: your Stripe login, or five minutes to create one.
